Gov. Tony Evers signs stadium funding bill to keep Brewers in Milwaukee

Gov. Tony Evers signed a ballpark funding bill to help the Milwaukee Brewers repair their stadium over the next three decades.

The state is estimated to contribute roughly $360-million over the course of 27 years on taxes collected through player salaries.

The city of Milwaukee and Milwaukee County will contribute $135-million, and the package also includes an additional $110-million from the Brewers.

The Brewers, for their part, will spend $110-million and extend their lease at the stadium through 2050, keeping Major League Baseball in its smallest market for another 27 years.

Every non-game event at American Family Field will now include a $2 ticket tax that will increase to $3 in 2033 and $4 in 2042, as well as an $8 surcharge on suite tickets that increases to $9 in 2033 and $10 in 2042.

Part of the plan includes winterizing American Family Field, a project estimated to cost about $25-million in an effort to host events year-round.

According to the Brewers, the stadium, which opened in 2001, which opened to replace the old county stadium, needs extensive repairs. The team argues that the stadium's glass outfield doors, seats and concourses should be replaced and that luxury suites and the video scoreboard need upgrades. The stadium's signature retractable roof, fire suppression systems, parking lots, elevators and escalators need work as well.

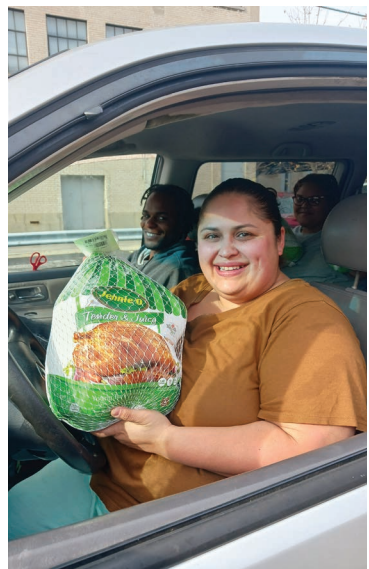

An analysis by the Legisla-

Christmas wishes

Christmas shopping officially began on November 24, 2023, the day after Thanksgiving, otherwise known as Black Friday. Gifts are now being purchased online and in malls across the USA. Children will be counting the gifts under Christmas trees. Many people will be in jewelry stores purchasing diamond rings for loved ones in hopes of future marriage. Many Christmas wishes will be fulfilled. Here are a few that hopefully will be granted to African Americans by Santa Claus or the Christmas Spirit.

One wish is that African Americans will overcome the animosity they exhibit towards one another. Wouldn't it be beautiful if African Americans engaged with each other in a courteous manner? A calm, respectful interaction between African Americans when they see each other in public. I am not talking about a love; just a courteous interaction when African Americans walk past each other in the grocery store. A simple nod of the head with a courteous smile or look on the face when one African American sees another. This is a simple wish that could reap such benefit in the African American community.

Another wish is that African Americans will overcome mediocrity. African Americans have settled for mediocre in all aspects of life. The African American image is one that doesn't push African Americans to be great. For example, the acceptance of the mediocre has allowed African Americans embrace a diet that creates obesity in both sexes. The rise of obesity in African Americans has led to a plethora of health problems, physical and mental. If African Americans can overcome mediocrity many health issues that they face would disappear.

The gift of self sufficiency is another wish for African Americans. African Americans have always sought assistance from other races. African Americans are always looking to unite with other races in their struggle. African Americans need to become self-sufficient and understand that no one is going to help them. If African Americans became self-sufficient they would understand that they do not need other races to pontificate for them. African Americans would maximize their talents, economic means, and potential to stand alone. The sad part is that African Americans are alone in their struggles. The only difference is many of their resources are wasted helping other races or trying to unite with these races. Self-sufficiency in the African American community, mentally and physically, would enable future generations to thrive.

An additional wish is that African Americans will once again show pride in their culture and history. African Americans have allowed their culture to digress into one of buffoonery and ignorance. The version of pride that African Americans exhibit in 2023 is really self-hate. African Americans have to understand what has happened to them in the past in order not to repeat it. The minstrel image that permeated US culture in the early 1900's of African American men is the norm in 2023.

The racist, nappy-headed, goofy, depiction of African American males has become the norm for African American youth. The negative image of a cheap, plaything for men is being grasped by African American females. A study of history in the USA will alert African American youth to the exploitation that is being done to them. A knowledge of black history will instill pride in African Americans of all ages and end the de-evolution of their culture and people.

These are a few wishes that if granted would lead to a productive 2024 for African Americans. I know Jordan shoes, hair weave, and other items would be more pleasing to many African Americans. In the long run where will these material gifts lead the race?

MPS senior wins 1st place in new national competition, the Ravenscroft Jazz Prize

Milwaukee High School of the Arts (MHSA) senior Dystince Robertson not only has won a national jazz competition, she made history doing it. She is the very first winner of the Ravenscroft Jazz Prize for developing musicians, ages 17 to 19.

Ravenscroft, based in Arizona, is a new competition for jazz artists that drew entries from across the country.

Dystince, who said she's never won anything and never expected to win, was notified of her 1st place prize by email. "Is this a scam?" she asked her MHSA choral director, Raymond J. Roberts.

Roberts, who had encouraged Dystince to enter the competition, assured her it was real.

"I felt so surprised, I couldn't believe it myself," Dystince said.

"I encouraged Dystince to submit her videos for the Ravenscroft Jazz Prize because of her innate musical instincts, her exquisite tone, and her extraordinary desire to grow as a musical artist through hard work and practice," Roberts said.

The honor brings with it a $1,000 prize. Coincidentally, 2nd place ($500) went to another singer with Milwaukee Public Schools roots: Damien Blair, a 2022 graduate of Milwaukee High School of the Arts. The developing musician contest this year was open only to vocalists; next year, it will be open to instrumentalists.

Ravenscroft also selected a 3rd place winner in the developing musician category. A second category awarded prizes to three early professional artists ages 20 to 22.

According to the prize's organizer, "The Ravenscroft Jazz Prize seeks to recognize and elevate young, American solo artists as they begin their journeys in improvised music.

"The inherently spontaneous nature of jazz allows musicians the freedom to explore and create. And this music provides a wonderful platform through which they can inspire others, even as they themselves are finding inspiration in performance."

Dystince's two videos were viewed by the panel of professional jazz musicians who adjudicated the prize. One video was of her performing the classic jazz ballad "Detour Ahead." In the other, she sang a medium swing tune, "There Will Never Be Another You."

Dystince, who honed her version of "Detour Ahead" over the course of a month, said the song suits her voice range. And, Dystince said, "I really love the way I'm musically connected to it."

It's unusual for her to sing solo, as she did for the Ravenscroft videos. In performances where all eyes are on one singer, "You have to connect yourself. You have to look forward and really connect with what you're saying, and get the audience ready to receive it," Dystince said.

That, to her, is the point of performing. "It's not only to sound good. I just want to connect as much as I can, musically and emotionally," she said.

In addition to the cash prize, Dystince received personalized comments from the prize's judges — constructive comments as well as praise. "I feel like this is a time when I need those comments the most," Dystince said. "I don't need people to tell me how perfect I am."

Ultimately, Dystince would like to have a career in music, either performing or teaching, to "help someone find their own talent," she said.

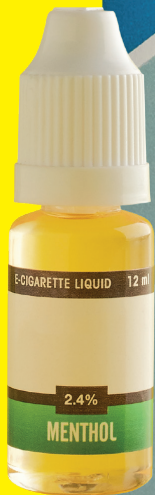

But first, she hopes to continue her musical education.

"I want to get deeper into learning musical notation and the way songs are composed," Dystince said.

She's intrigued by the way a musician can, say, change a song's beat, "and it completely changes the song."

"Music is so fascinating," she said.

Ten warning signs of mold toxicity in the body

Toxic mold may cause serious illness and even death. In most cases, exposure to harmful mold spores is the major cause.

Multiple symptoms of mold poisoning and other inexplicable ailments may be brought on by mold toxicity. If not caught and treated promptly, mold—which may take on a variety of hues, including green, black, red, and white—can cause serious health problems.

Who is at a greater risk for mold toxicity?

Mold toxicity affects individuals of all ages, but it poses a greater threat to those with asthma or other respiratory problems, who are sensitive to molds, reside in homes with inadequate ventilation and humidity, work in fields where mold exposure is necessary, or live in areas prone to flooding.

What are the signs that mold contamination is negatively impacting your health? Well, there are a lot of symptoms that might indicate you've been exposed to harmful molds.

Here are 10 symptoms of mold toxicity you need to watch out for

#1 Allergic reactions

Mold spores may trigger certain allergic responses, which can cause mold allergies. Symptoms like congestion, coughing, skin rashes, and wheezing are possible.

Exposure to hazardous mold usually causes these symptoms to manifest right away. Remember that mold allergies are more common in those with compromised immune systems.

#2 Fatigue

You can suffer from mold poisoning if you're always tired and have no energy. This is because the elimination of mold toxins requires more energy than usual, which may lead to persistent feelings of lethargy.

#3 Respiratory problems

Because it impacts every region of the respiratory system, mold toxins may cause various respiratory issues.

The sinuses, bronchi, nose, and throat may all become inflamed as a result. Inhaling mold spores may lead to various respiratory issues, including a stuffy nose, profuse coughing, difficulty breathing, and a tight chest.

#4 Skin problems

Among the most noticeable signs of mold poisoning are certain skin issues. Eczema, redness, itching, and rashes are among them.

Inflammation and other skin issues are exacerbated when immune responses are triggered by skin exposure to mold spores. Skin problems like dermatitis, scaly skin, and dry skin may be brought on by inhaling or consuming mold spores.

#5 Digestive problems

Additionally, gastrointestinal issues may result from mold poisoning. Stomach discomfort, diarrhea, acid reflux, and gas are some of the gastrointestinal disorders that may arise from consuming food infected with mold.

Toxins increase the likelihood of gastrointestinal issues by disrupting the intestinal flora balance.

#6 Headaches and migraines

Severe headaches or migraines may be caused by exposure to poisonous mold. Inflammation in the brain, brought on by mold spores and other harmful mold by-products, is the typical culprit behind these symptoms.

#7 Chronic sinus issues

Mold spores may cause chronic sinusitis and severe congestion. It can potentially aggravate sinus issues by irritating the nasal canal mucosal membrane. The possible side effects are the inability to smell, discomfort in the face and teeth, postnasal drip, and headaches.

#8 Joint problems

In addition to causing fungal arthritis, mold toxins may cause joint stiffness and other issues.

Muscle and joint discomfort, swelling, restricted mobility, and other musculoskeletal problems may all stem from fungal spore accumulation in tissues and bones, which in turn can promote inflammation. Joints such as the hips, knees, shoulders, and ankles are susceptible to fungal arthritis.

#9 Cognitive problems

Molds may cause brain damage due to their poisons. They cause neuroinflammation and cognitive impairment once they reach the brain and spinal cord.

According to studies, Mycotoxins, which are present in molds, may disrupt brain function and cause direct harm to neurons. Consequently, it disrupts the normal flow of information between brain cells, leading to a host of cognitive issues, including forgetfulness, attention issues, and brain fog.

#10 Depression and anxiety

Mold poisoning may affect brain processes and lead to anxiety and depression problems, according to studies. Mood swings and depressive symptoms may result from toxic mold spores interfering with neurotransmitters such as serotonin and dopamine.

Seek prompt medical attention if you experience any of the symptoms mentioned above. It should be borne in mind that the aforementioned symptoms might provide an even greater threat to people with compromised immune systems or other health conditions.

In addition, it is advised to contact a professional remediation service and get the mold cleaned immediately upon discovery.
