Milwaukee Public Library celebrates grand opening of state-of-the-art MLK branch in Harambee Neighborhood

On Saturday, September 6, 2025, the Milwaukee Public Library celebrated the grand opening of its new Martin Luther King Branch. Located in the city's Harambee neighborhood, the 17,400-square-foot facility greeted city leaders, neighbors, and families with enthusiasm as they cut the ribbon and explored the state-of-the-art space that promises to be a beacon of knowledge and technology. The new space offers plenty for users young and old to flex their creativity, including a fully equipped maker-space with 3D printing, podcasting equipment, and the latest technology, a large community room designed for public meetings and events, dedicated children's and teen areas, and computer stations, private study spaces, and meeting rooms. The library, now based at 2901 N. MLK Jr. Dr, is not only a testament to the enduring value of public spaces dedicated to learning but also stands as a symbol of the city's innovative spirit and commitment to environmental sustainability. At the opening, Mayor Cavalier Johnson described the library as a "symbol of innovation", while City Librarian Joan Johnson proudly shared its achievement as the region's greenest library, complete with solar panels, geothermal heating and cooling, and a green roof. The new library underscores a unified commitment to the intellectual and creative prosperity of Milwaukee's residents.

North Division HS celebrates graduation of Adult Welding Job Training program participants

On Thursday, August 7, 2025, the Adult Welding Job Training program at North Division High School, 1011 W. Center St., celebrated the completion of the most recent class. The program was initiated through a collaborative effort involving the Milwaukee Public Schools (MPS) Recreation Department (MKE Rec), Milwaukee Area Technical College (MATC) Workforce Development Solution, and the George Gerharz North Division High School Alumni and Friends, Inc. This program is open to adults aged 18 and older.

Plans are in place to renovate the welding, dental, and Cognitive and Affective Neuroscience Labs (CAN labs) at the school. These renovations aim to provide local job training opportunities for both adults and students. The North Division High School students will have access to these labs for training during regular school hours, similar to the certification program offered by other high schools in the area.

Community leaders are encouraged to support these initiatives to foster economic growth and job security. The program acknowledges the contributions of various individuals and organizations, including Dr. Howard Fuller, Elton Gillie, Beverly Lewis Moses, Milwaukee Urban League Teacher Margaret Todd, William Clay, MKE Rec Recreation Coordinator Matthew Goodwin, NAACP National Board of Directors member Wendell Harris, Sam Williams, and Milwaukee Times Weekly Newspaper owner Rev. Harold Turner, Sr.

Pre-1950 MPS elementary school buildings are cleared of lead risks

After months of intensive work, all 50 Milwaukee Public School (MPS) schools built before 1950 that serve elementary students were cleared of lead risks, Milwaukee Public Schools Superintendent Brenda Cassellius announced Friday, September 5, 2025.

“We are committed to providing safe and welcoming schools to the community. Successfully addressing lead paint issues is a critical step in this work,” Dr. Cassellius said. “I am grateful for the tireless efforts of our Facilities and Maintenance Services team led by Interim Chief Operating Officer Mike Turza, our contractors, and the Milwaukee Health Department.”

The news comes during the first week of school for the 65,000-plus students who attend MPS. As the school year started Tuesday, 43 of the 50 elementary buildings built before 1950 were fully cleared. In the remaining seven schools, lead paint stabilization work was already completed and a limited number of spaces—typically one or two rooms in each school, including a bathroom in one case—were closed to students and staff during final cleaning and testing. Now the work is completed, and all 50 schools are cleared. The final two schools received clearances Thursday night.

“We have recognized this need with urgency and are grateful for the work of Dr. Cassellius and her team,” said Missy Zombor, president of the Milwaukee Board of School Directors. “The board will continue to provide oversight so we maintain high-quality, safe, and healthy facilities for students and staff.”

This fall, MPS will shift its focus to 52 schools built between 1950 and 1978 that serve elementary students. Due to the decreased use of lead-based paint during this period, the schools in this group have lower lead risks. Surveys of the buildings also have indicated lower lead hazards. (Lead paint was banned after 1978.) Work will be done outside of school hours to minimize disruptions to students and staff. The district’s goal is to complete the work by December 2025.

MPS Photos

In Spring 2026, the district will complete final cosmetic painting in some of the first 50 schools where, to prioritize opening the schools safely by September, painting was focused on specific areas that needed to be stabilized.

Cassellius extended particular thanks to Mich  l Mannan of the City of Milwaukee Health Department for his support. Since spring, Mannan served as a temporary in-house consultant with MPS to help address the lead crisis. “From the beginning, MHD’s Home Environmental Health team has worked extensively with MPS to strengthen their facilities program around lead hazards,” said Mannan, who is director of the Health Department’s Home Environmental Health program.

“It’s unusual for MHD to embed its own program director inside a school district, but this collaborative step was necessary to tackle the crisis from the inside out,” Mannan said. “Through this partnership, MHD helped MPS develop a strong stabilization plan, provided technical oversight, and ensured clearances met state standards. Thanks to everyone’s collaborative efforts, MPS is in a much stronger position to maintain safe buildings for years to come.”

Said City of Milwaukee Commissioner of Health Mike Totoraitis, PhD, “When our investigation first brought lead hazards in MPS schools to light in early 2025, the City of Milwaukee Health Department immediately stepped in to work side by side with the district to identify hazards across the district and build a comprehensive plan for renovations and ongoing maintenance.

“I’m proud of the extensive work our team has done since then to support MPS and ensure schools meet safety standards. MHD is pleased with the progress MPS made this summer to get buildings ready for the new school year, and we’re confident they can continue this work to keep schools safe in the future.”

MPS will continue to update its lead report page online so the community can see progress. Visit mps.mke.com/mpsleadreport.

Supreme Court greenlights racial profiling by ICE

Source: Black Information Network.com

The Supreme Court of the United States has ruled that Immigration and Customs Enforcement agents can detain individuals without reasonable suspicion in certain cases, allowing race, language, location, and job type to be considered in immigration stops.

In a 6-3 ruling on Monday, September 8, 2025, the Supreme Court lifted a lower court order that blocked ICE (U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement) agents in Los Angeles from targeting individuals based on four factors, including ethnicity, language or accent, location, and employment type, per HuffPost. The lower court ruling was issued by U.S. District Judge Maame Ewusi-Mensah Frimpong, who said stops based on these factors violated the Fourth Amendment, which protects against unreasonable searches and seizures.

However, Justice Brett Kavanaugh cited the Immigration and Nationality Act, which allows agents to interrogate or briefly detain a person “believed to be an alien.”

Kavanaugh argued Monday that in areas with a high number of undocumented immigrants, like Los Angeles, factors such as working in day labor, landscaping, or agriculture, speaking limited English, or being of Central American or Mexican descent could be used to justify brief stops.

“To be clear, apparent ethnicity alone cannot furnish reasonable suspicion,” Kavanaugh wrote. “However, it can be a ‘relevant factor’ when considered along with other salient factors.”

Kavanaugh also downplayed the Fourth Amendment concerns, saying ICE questioning of individuals would be “typically brief” and they would be “promptly” released upon proving their legal status.

The Supreme Court justice acknowledged that many undocumented immigrants come to the U.S. “to escape poverty and the lack of freedom,” but concluded, “the fact remains... they are acting illegally by remaining in the United States.”

Justice Sonia Sotomayor, along with Justices Elena Kagan and Ketanji Brown Jackson, issued a forceful dissent against the ruling that effectively legitimizes racial profiling by ICE.

“We should not have to live in a country where the Government can seize anyone who looks Latino, speaks Spanish, and appears to work a low wage job,” Sotomayor wrote. “Rather than stand idly by while our constitutional freedoms are lost, I dissent.”

Sotomayor also accused the federal government of effectively declaring “that all Latinos, U.S. citizens or not, who work low wage jobs are fair game to be seized at any time.”

The case stemmed from a Trump administration policy directing DHS to ramp up ICE operations, which has reportedly led to the detainment of both immigrants and U.S. citizens in Los Angeles. With the stay on Frimpong’s order lifted, ICE agents in Los Angeles can resume using race, language, location, and job type as factors in stopping individuals.

Being Frank

Marriage, misery or acceptance

Recently I was talking to a married person who was talking about their marriage. This person talked about how they enjoyed the fact that someone was at home when they arrived there. I figured the person was happily married. As the conversation proceeded I found out different. This encounter led me to talk to other married people. I came to realize that many of the married people I encountered were married for convenience, not love. Most were unconsciously unhappy. After these conversations, and looking at the statistics for marriage in the USA, I came to a conclusion, many married people are miserable.

“I now pronounce you man and wife.” This sentence is supposed to be a bridge to a union between two people to bring about peace, love and happiness. This statement must not apply to first marriages. The divorce rate for first time marriage is around 40 to 50 percent according to Modern Family Law. Does this mean that the first marriage is for practice? This makes sense if you apply sports rules to marriage.

Web Image

You have to practice to get better at any sport. Maybe marriage in the USA is some perverse sport?

“Till death do us part.” The previous statement is another heavy line from the marriage speech the reverend delivers on wedding day. Gray divorce rates, divorce between people 50 and older, have doubled. Many people in the USA have decided to forgo the life insurance payment that comes when death takes their spouse. Freedom may be worth more than money to many. Yet, why would someone want to leave if love was the basis for the marriage?

“For richer, for poorer,” is another shot from the marriage vows. In the modern USA the second part is not happening for many US citizens. The money factor is one major key to marriage in the USA. How many times have you seen an attractive person with someone who was not? A high number of the previous scenarios take place because of one underlying factor, money. Who can blame someone for not wanting to be poor? Yet, in the USA the rich part has become a hangup that often keeps marriage from taking place. Tina

Turner once sang, “What’s love got to do with it?” This line sums up the mindset of many potential marriage participants. Both sexes tend to look at the financial outlook instead of love. This can lead to financial success, but married misery. “Money can’t buy me love,” The Beatles may have gotten it right with that line.

Many people are married and do not truly care for their spouse. What then becomes of these people? Divorce is an option. Yet, many stay married to their spouse because of family or they simply don’t know anything else. A dog that has been kicked enough still hangs around the master that kicks it. This is true for many married people. They stay tethered to misery because of children or financial reasons. These people adapt to emotional misery and it becomes their norm. If you talk to them they will tell you how they hate being married, but either can’t, or won’t leave.

Everyone has seen a married person who just seems to follow the lead of their spouse. The husband who seems to be a puppet of his wife. The wife who accepts her husband’s infidelity because she thinks her glory days have passed. These type of people make up a high number of married people in the USA. Why? Many people in these type of situations are scared of being alone. Fear, not love keeps the marriage going on their end. Is this the true meaning of, “For better or for worse?”

There are happily married people in the USA. You see them smiling and enjoying each other’s company. Congratulate these people when you see such a couple. Do the same when you see an unhappy pairing. After all, better them than you.

Celebrating the Life of Mrs. Ira C. Jones

Sunrise: August 27, 1930 • Sunset: August 28, 2025

Mrs. Ira C. Jones was born in Jackson, Mississippi to the union of Phillip Rodgers and Elizabeth Rodgers (Mosley). She arrived in Milwaukee, Wisconsin in the early 1950's and lived on Booth and Center.

Mrs. Ira C. Jones was strong willed, stern, always did things her way, and she would tell it like it is. She lived that old school lifestyle and demanded respect. Mrs. Ira C. Jones worked at a tannery and was an entrepreneur of two restaurants, a transporter, and was a beloved nurses' assistant, who was considered an affectionate and humorous person by all of her patients.

In her leisure, Mrs. Ira C. Jones enjoyed fishing, traveling, playing Bizwit and became very loud and humorous, and visiting with family and friends. She was formerly married to the late Calvin Henry Jones, Sr. and together they had her sons Calvin Henry Jones, Jr., Michael Scott Jones, Sr. grandson Michael Jones, granddaughters Tangela Mitchell and LaToya Mitchell, and a great-granddaughter Braelyn J. Sims, Taraji Joyner, great-grandson Raquan MacDonald. Services on Saturday, September 20, viewing 10:00 a.m. followed by a service at 11:00 a.m. at Northwest Funeral Chapel, 6630 W Hampton Ave, Milwaukee, WI 53218.

September is life insurance awareness month: Are you covered?

September is Life Insurance Awareness Month, which is a month-long public awareness campaign sponsored by the nonprofit organization Life Happens.

If the income you earn would suddenly stop due to death, could your family continue to meet their financial obligations, such as paying the rent or mortgage, paying bills, daily living expenses, or even sending a child to college? If not, having a life insurance planning discussion with your financial advisor is imperative. While the planning discussion surrounding death is often uncomfortable, it is necessary to ensure you have the proper amount of life insurance for your family to maintain their current and future lifestyle should you die. A life insurance policy provides an income-tax free cash death benefit to your family in case you die early or unexpectedly, which can be used to replace lost income and fund other needs.

According to a recent study* nearly half 47 percent of U.S. adults say they would have trouble paying living expenses within six months of their primary wage earner's death. The study also found that 40 percent of individuals believe they need more life insurance, representing close to 100 million people.

Your life insurance needs are unique, and throughout your lifespan, those needs can change based on your income earned and family situation. As a result, changes may need to be made to the amount and type of life insurance owned. As a first step in reviewing insurance needs, gather your current life insurance policy statements for an evaluation by your advisor, who can help you take an inventory of your existing coverage and determine if you have a surplus or shortage of coverage by conducting a life insurance needs analysis. This analysis can compare income needs to income sources, and can determine how much additional life insurance is needed to protect any shortfall.

Don't let your family suffer financially should the unexpected happen. Your financial advisor can review your situation to ensure your family will be protected should your income be halted due to an unforeseen death.

Money talks: how opening up can ease financial stress

Source: Samuel Curtis Johnson Graduate School of Management

In Western cultures, talking about money is considered taboo. But new research from the Cornell SC Johnson College of Business challenges that notion and finds that people who regularly discuss their finances – whether with family, friends or even strangers online – experience less financial anxiety over time.

Emily N. Garbinsky, associate professor at the Samuel Curtis Johnson Graduate School of Management, and her co-authors find that the more people talk about their personal finances, the better they feel.

“Many of us were taught that discussing salaries, debt or financial worries is impolite or even shameful,” Garbinsky said. “But according to our research, bottling up these money worries might be making things worse.”

The paper “Opening Up About Money: The Unexpected Benefits of Personal Financial Disclosure,” published July 8, 2025, in Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes. Co-authors include Matt Meister, assistant professor at the University of San Francisco, and Joe Gladstone, assistant professor at the University of California,

San Diego.

Financial anxiety, defined as the stress and worry people feel about their finances, affects over 60 percent of adults in the U.S. and has real consequences – poor mental health, reduced job performance and even higher accident rates in some professions.

The researchers found that initiating a conversation is often the best place to start. They conducted eight studies – including surveys, experiments and analysis of nearly 1 million online posts – to understand how talking about money affects our financial stress levels. They found that sharing information about one's financial situation lowers anxiety by giving an individual a greater sense of control. Putting financial concerns into words helps organize one's thoughts and shifts the mindset from confusion to clarity, they found.

One of the studies asked people to talk about their finances with another person of their choosing once a week for a month. Compared to those who talked about non-financial issues, the money-talkers ended the study with less anxiety, both financial and general. What's more, people who talked about controllable topics, such as spending and saving, saw a bigger drop in anxiety than those who talked about things out of their hands, like job loss or medical bills, suggesting that what you share matters.

The researchers found that talking about something within your financial control reduces your financial anxiety to a greater extent than talking about something outside of your financial control.

“While face-to-face conversations can help, sharing online is also effective and might be even better because digital platforms give people more time to think, write, edit and reflect on what they're saying,” Garbinsky said.

Building on this idea, the researchers discovered that people who frequently posted about their finances in online forums used fewer anxiety-related words over time. The more they posted, the better they felt.

Despite these consistent findings across both in-person and digital communication forums, people don't seem to comprehend that talking about money helps. Many expect that talking about money will make them feel worse.

In a pilot study, the research team found that people anticipate that talking about money – as opposed to other sensitive topics, such as health, parenting or job performance – will increase their anxiety. They found the opposite to be true.

“And in a world where financial anxiety is widespread and often ignored,” Garbinsky said, “it might be time to replace silence with sharing.”

Life Insurance Awareness Month

Why Life Insurance? Why Not!

By: Launita Dawson, Licensed Life Insurance Professional

Many people avoid discussing their mortality, but planning ahead can prevent the "why didn't I..." regrets. Often, we assume someone else will handle it or that we need to ask family members for contributions. However, life insurance ensures your final wishes are honored, your loved ones aren't financially burdened, and your children face no major life changes. It provides peace of mind during challenging times by covering potential financial losses, such as losing your home or income.

September is Life Insurance Awareness Month (LIAM), so take this opportunity to talk to your family. Planning can help eliminate fears about mortality.

For more information about life insurance call (262)737-4130 and a licensed insurance professional will be glad to help you.

NOT ALL LEADERS CARRY EXECUTIVE TITLES.

The most powerful change often comes from those rooted in movement work.

Milwaukee Water Commons is seeking a Co-Executive Director.

Are you deeply grounded in the values of environmental and racial justice with a commitment to community leadership and collective action?

We know powerful leaders don't always see themselves reflected in traditional nonprofit leadership roles.

We are building a multicultural, multi-racial movement that lifts up leadership and innovation across our city and ensures that everyone has a voice in decisions about the care of our water.

If you bring visionary and strategic leadership and a heart for justice for people and planet, we want to hear from you.
