CELEBRATING 100 YEARS OF BLACK HISTORY MONTH

The 2026 Black History Month theme is "A Century of Black History Commemorations," designated by the Association for the Study of African American Life and History (ASALH). This theme marks the 100th anniversary of the first Negro History Week, initiated by Dr. Carter G. Woodson in 1926, celebrating a century of honoring African American history, culture, and contributions.

Key aspects of the 2026 theme include:

- Centennial Recognition: Celebrating 100 years of efforts to study and promote Black history, originally launched in February 1926.

- Significance of Commemoration: Exploring how the practice of commemorating Black history has shaped the identity, pride, and societal understanding of Black people.

- Focus on Truth: Emphasizing the importance of telling an accurate and inclusive history, particularly in the face of contemporary challenges to education and historical narratives.

Milwaukee Common Council legislation addresses food desert crisis

The legislation would direct the city's health department and department of city development to figure out how to attract and retain grocery stores and pharmacies.

Source: WISN12 News

Amid a food desert crisis on Milwaukee's north side, the city's common council is taking action. Legislation authored by Alderwoman Milele Coggs directs city departments to figure out how to attract and keep grocery stores and pharmacies in the city.

Wooden boards and padlocks cover what was the Aldi at Sherman and Hopkins. The sign is now blank after its abrupt closure last month.

"People don't have transportation," Vanda Adams said. "It's just sad. I mean, everything is closing up."

The Sentry at 64th and Silver Spring also closed, just days after Aldi. Its sign has been torn down.

"It's like poverty out here," James Rogers said.

The stores' closures widened a food desert on the city's north west side. With the Aldi closing, the next closest grocery store for some is a Pick 'n Save at 56th and Capitol, which is more than two miles away.

Rogers said the Aldi was close to his house. He drives to the Pick 'n Save now.

"It's just an inconvenience," Rogers said.

The council legislation Alderwoman Coggs wrote "would direct the Department of City Development and the Milwaukee Health Department to work directly to attract and retain grocery stores and pharmacies in the City of Milwaukee."

The city also lost multiple Walgreens and CVS Pharmacies in the past two years, including the Walgreens at 76th and Mill, which shut down last July.

tions," Adams said.

Coggs did not respond to WISN 12 News' requests for an interview Tuesday, February 3, 2026, looking for more details on what it would take to attract and keep grocery stores and pharmacies in the city. 12 News took the same question to Meijer, Walmart, Kroger and Pick 'n Save. Only a representative for Walmart responded, saying "we don't have any information to share."

"It's going to take the whole neighborhood, the community, to bring the big stores back," Rogers said.

In a statement to WISN 12 News, the city's health department said, "The City of Milwaukee Health Department (MHD) shares the Common Council's concern about access to grocery stores and pharmacies, and the impact these closures have on residents' health and well-being. MHD is looking forward to sharing details soon on a number of initiatives underway to strengthen access to essential services across the city."

MPS celebrates Black History Month

Milwaukee Public Schools (MPS) is celebrating Black History Month! Throughout February, MPS students will take part in projects and performances centered on the contributions of black Americans. Join us for activities during the Black Lives Matter Week of Action, February 2–6, 2026.

Black History Month is coming alive in Milwaukee Public Schools. Students and staff across the district are honoring the contributions of black Americans who have helped build our country and promote peace and equality.

Famous names such as Sojourner Truth, Jackie Robinson, Al Jarreau, and Michelle Obama will be woven into classroom activities this month. At all grade levels, teachers will be promoting educational activities that explore the heritage of black Americans.

Students, families, staff, and the community are invited to listen in as panel discussions take place on topics centered on current issues such as the role of race, Girls of Color, Historically Black Colleges and Universities, and more. Find a complete schedule on our Black Lives Matter Week of Action webpage.

We are proud of the efforts of our schools in bringing Black History Month to life. Watch for stories of our students' activities throughout February.

MPS reaffirms that all its sites are Safe Havens

Every Milwaukee Public Schools (MPS) site is a Safe Haven for individuals of all ethnicities, religions, cultural backgrounds, immigration statuses, and sexual orientations or identities.

The district knows that actions by immigration agents elsewhere in the Midwest have caused concern, including in the MPS and greater Milwaukee communities. While recent reports of increased activity here turned out not to be true, there is still real fear for many.

The district wants to remind its students, families, and staff of important information.

Immigration status and enrollment

MPS does not ask for immigration status of families. No public school has a basis to deny children access to education based on immigration status, according to federal court rulings.

What would happen if an immigration agent came to a school

The school would call a HOLD, which means students stay in their classrooms and staff lock classroom doors. (The HOLD action is part of the nationally recognized Standard Response Protocol used by schools across the country.)

The school would refer the individuals away from the school and to MPS Central Services and the Department of Student Services. (These practices are consistent with how the district handles other law enforcement requests.)

Detailed steps are available in presentations posted on the Safe Haven webpage.

In the coming weeks, at a time when students are not present, MPS school staff members will practice a HOLD action in order to be best prepared.

Our Safe Haven resolution and resources

These practices are based on the district's Safe Haven Resolution, which was approved by the Milwaukee Board of School Directors.

The district continues to update the Safe Haven webpage with resources available in multiple languages.

Student-led walkouts

MPS recognizes the rights of our students to share their opinions and views.

Students at a number of high schools have led walkouts, which were not district- or school-organized or sponsored.

When this happens, students are marked absent. Students are monitored while they remain on campus for their safety, and students who participate are allowed back into the building.

Staff political activity

MPS also respects the personal civic engagement of our employees, however, such activities must occur outside of work hours and without the use of district resources.

Employees may not en-

MPS Photos

gage in political-related activities during the workday, while supervising students, or while using district time or resources. This includes in-person activity, electronic communications, and the use of district systems.

The district's safety team continues to meet and review these issues so MPS can continue to keep its schools safe and welcoming. All schools now have bilingual posters declaring the schools as Safe Havens of learning and support. In this district, everyone is valued and no one is pushed aside. The Milwaukee Board of School Directors and MPS administration continue to support this fundamental belief.

How the Food Stamp “Junk Ban” is causing issues and confusion

By Karen Heslop

For years, many families have relied on the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP) to help meet their nutritional needs. While there have always been restrictions on what these food stamps could purchase, the latest change focuses on banning what it classifies as ‘junk food’. When policy-makers first mentioned this modification, they gave the impression that it would be an easy change. Unfortunately, the reality is far from the truth, and it may be detrimental to those who depend on the program to keep their families fed.

What the ban entails

When he pushed for the ban on junk food, Health Secretary Robert F. Kennedy Jr. stated, “We cannot continue a system that forces taxpayers to fund programs that make people sick and then pay a second time to treat the illnesses those very programs help create.” In keeping with that belief, restrictions were to be placed on foods that were considered to be non-nutritious. This may include candy, soda, and certain snacks.

By doing this, the administration aims to ensure that tax dollars are being used to buy healthy foods that support a health-conscious diet. The hope is that there will be a decrease in obesity and weight-related chronic illnesses that can be a burden on medical facilities. However, as the bans roll out, many experts are expressing concerns about what’s going to happen.

Why the ban is causing confusion for many

The first issue with the ban is that there is no set definition for what constitutes ‘junk food’. Without it, the states that have instituted a ban on certain foods have simply chosen the foods they would define as being unhealthy. That means different foods are banned depending on your state. For example, Indiana restricts the purchase of soft drinks and candy, while Nebraska restricts purchases of soda and energy drinks if you’re using food stamps.

If you live in Virginia and use SNAP, you may not be able to buy ‘sweetened beverages’ starting in April. People who depend on SNAP in Tennessee may be banned from buying processed foods, candy, soda, and energy drinks as of July. The rules may even vary depending on whether or not you’re shopping online. That kind of variation will hardly result in widespread health changes if states decide that different food items are unhealthy.

In addition to having differing bans, experts note that some states haven’t provided retailers and other organizations with definitive lists of banned items. What exactly is a ‘sweetened beverage’? Even with candies, you have to state which types of sweets can’t be purchased. Does this include cough drops and other similar products that are usually consumed for medicinal purposes?

Sometimes, when a definition is given, it changes from one state to another. Hawaii defines soft drinks as ‘nonalcoholic carbonated beverages that have more than 10 grams of sugar per serving, which don’t include drinks that contain milk or milk substitutes, or drinks that are more than 50 percent fruit or vegetable juice’. However, Indiana defines soft drinks as ‘non-alcoholic sweetened drinks, including drinks with sugar or artificial sweeteners, but not including milk-based drinks, soy milk, rice milk, or drinks sweetened only with 100 percent fruit or vegetable juice’.

The lack of information is confusing as retailers aren’t sure which products their customers aren’t able to purchase. Similarly, manufacturers don’t know if they need to modify their distribution or materials to reflect that their products are no longer on the list of foods that can be purchased using your SNAP benefits.

To make things worse, experts warn that the entire program could buckle from the strain of dealing with these changes. With a stripped budget, SNAP is already struggling to meet its mandate. The ban could result in more complaints and more people not getting any nutritional value. When people try to shop and get rejected at the counter, they may opt not to buy the healthy foods they usually aim for or not eat well at all.

Additionally, health experts state that there’s no evidence that these kinds of restrictions will make people any healthier. They suggest that doing a study that encompasses statistics on what beneficiaries of SNAP usually purchase and their health status would have been a better place to start. That information would have shown whether or not these bans would have the results they desire.

Finally, the effects of these bans are unlikely to only affect those who use SNAP benefits. The experts warn that the confusion at stores may cause longer shopping times as the lines at the cashier move more slowly. While these restrictions were suggested before, they weren’t implemented because the US Department of Agriculture (USDA) research showed that it was unlikely to positively affect how people ate. It was also determined that the changes would be too expensive and complicated to implement.

In fact, industry groups like the National Grocers Association estimated that implementing these SNAP restrictions would cost U.S. retailers $1.6 billion initially and $759 million every year afterward. That could mean an overall increase in the cost of buying food for everyone.

Why your stores are cautious

With all this confusion, you may wonder why some stores don’t flout the rules to help or keep the lines moving until everything is clear. Unfortunately, there are consequences for retailers if they don’t comply. There is a 90-day grace period within which retailers are expected to work on compliance, but surveillance continues for the entire time the retailers are allowed to accept SNAP.

The first offense after the end of the 90-day period results in a warning letter. The next offense results in withdrawal from the program entirely. Interestingly, there doesn’t seem to be a period after which the first offense is no longer considered. That first warning letter means that the retailer is always at risk of being taken out of the program.

Of course, retailers can appeal any warnings they have received. However, this may take time and resources that they don’t necessarily have. Additionally, appealing doesn’t mean that they’ll receive a favourable response. Even after taking the time to undergo a re-assessment, they may not be placed on the list again. That means it’s in their best interest to comply.

How to shop carefully with the changes

At this point, you may be wondering what you can purchase if you use SNAP. The first place to check is the USDA website, as they have a list of states that have implemented or will implement a junk food ban. If nothing has changed in your state yet, then you should be able to buy the things you usually do.

If you’re in a state where bans have been implemented, it’s a good idea to check your state’s official SNAP website for guidance. For example, the West Virginia website has a definition of what it considers a soda. It says:

For the purpose of this waiver, soda is defined as any carbonated, non-alcoholic beverage that contains water, a sweetening agent (including but not limited to sugar, high-fructose corn syrup, or artificial sweeteners), flavoring, and carbon dioxide gas to create carbonation. This term includes beverages with added caffeine or other ingredients but does not include carbonated water without sweeteners or flavoring.

If you haven’t found a definition, then it may be helpful to go shopping when your stores aren’t as full or shop for the basics first. Talking to others or the cashiers may give you an idea of which products they have been rejecting for purchase with SNAP.

The new changes to SNAP benefits are being implemented on varying schedules, but they will likely be around until 2027. While various experts have their concerns about how these bans will affect the people who use SNAP, you have to find ways to effectively navigate them so you can still eat healthily.
