Ten Chimneys hosts Lunt-Fontanne Fellowship Program with Phylicia Rashad

On Friday evening, Fellows and guests gathered for A Conversation with Phylicia Rashad, an inspiring and memorable discussion with one of America's most celebrated artists. Then on Saturday night, the 2026 Lunt-Fontanne Fellows took center stage for The Concluding Presentation, bringing to life scenes that reflected the remarkable talent, courage, and artistry cultivated throughout their week together.

Audiences were treated to powerful excerpts from Our Town, Cabaret, Flying West, Liberation, waiting for Godot, The Way of the World, August Osage County, Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?, POTUS, African School: Or African Mean Girls, and A Streetcar Named Desire.

From laughter to heartbreak, from classic works to contemporary voices, the performances showcased the range, passion, and dedication of this year's Fellows. Thank you to Phylicia Rashad, our master teacher, Fellows, supporters, and audiences for making this year's Lunt-Fontanne Fellowship Program such a memorable celebration of American theater.

Wisconsin Democratic gubernatorial candidates face off in only debate before primary

Five Democratic candidates vying to become Wisconsin's next governor faced off in their one-and-only debate Tuesday, exactly two weeks before Election Day and on the same day in-person absentee voting began across the state.

The debate came after a significant shake-up in the race when Sara Rodriguez dropped out, prompting Milwaukee County Executive David Crowley to re-enter the contest.

The Democratic field now includes Crowley, former Lieutenant Governor Mandela Barnes, businessman Joel Brennan, State Representative Francesca Hong and State Senator Kelda Roys.

The most recent Marquette polls showed that nearly half of all Democratic voters were still undecided earlier this month, meaning all 5 candidates still had the chance to win over lots of last-minute voters.

Hong, a Democratic socialist, has been the consistent frontrunner in many polls as she tries to make the move from state representative to governor. She pushed back on claims she would defund police after previous suggestions she would.

"The governor cannot defund police, and I'm not here to govern by slogan. I'm here to make sure that I am the governor that is most serious about public safety, and that means investing in the things that we know prevent crime," Hong said.

David Crowley picked up Governor Evers's endorsement after restarting his campaign. The county executive made his case to voters on the debate stage.

"I grew up in the 53206 zip code where I had to work extremely hard for everything that I have, and so I'm not here to protect the establishment. I'm here to deliver real results for Wisconsinites all over our state," Crowley said.

Mandela Barnes is attempting a political comeback. The former lieutenant governor argued the state's income tax structure needs to change.

"The way we give more money back to people, the way we actually return money to folks, is by taxing the wealthy, taxing the billionaires, taxing these corporations that have been getting over on us, making money hand over fist while communities continue to starve for resources," Barnes said.

Joel Brennan leaned on his executive roles in government and a nonprofit, suggesting his budget surplus priorities would focus on childcare.

"The first thing that I would spend — the first $100 million, which I will do in January, will go into childcare and early childhood education. It is a system that is broken," Brennan said.

Kelda Roys finished third in her 2018 run for governor. The state senator called for fully funding public schools while phasing out the state's private school vouchers program.

"I believe that public dollars belong in public schools, and if you take even $1 of public money, you need to be subject to accountability. And yes, over time I am going to bring the private voucher scheme to an end," Roys said.

The winner of the Democratic primary will likely face Republican Representative Tom Tiffany, who has been endorsed by President Trump. Following the debate, Tiffany responded, saying in part: "While Democrats offer chaos, I'm offering common sense. Lower taxes, safer communities, stronger schools and a government that lets the people of Wisconsin keep more of their hard-earned money."

108,000 voters in Wisconsin have already cast their ballots through mail-in absentee voting. 30% of those numbers come from the state's two biggest Democratic counties, Dane and Milwaukee.

The debate was held on the campus of Marquette University by WISN 12 News.

Evers declares state of emergency after storms, EF-3 tornado hit in Wisconsin

Gov. Tony Evers declared a state of emergency Tuesday, July 28, 2026 after severe storms swept through eastern Wisconsin on Monday, July 27, 2026 including at least one confirmed tornado. Preliminary surveys indicate EF-3 damage in the Menasha and Appleton area, according to the governor's office. The Monday storms also brought high winds, hail, power outages and disruptions to public water systems, causing widespread damage, particularly in the Fox Cities. "We are continuing to assess the devastation and destruction Wisconsin is seeing, especially in the Fox Cities, and we are committed to doing everything we can to help every family, business, and community affected recover," Evers said. Evers says he signed the declaration, Executive Order 300, to help state agencies, local partners and utilities coordinate their response. The State Emergency Operations Center was raised to a Level 3 on Monday, and multiple fire, law enforcement, public works and utility crews have been deployed to affected areas.

Wisconsin appeals court restores Act 10 anti-union law

Wisconsin appeals court overturns ruling that had restored collective bargaining power

A Wisconsin appeals court on Wednesday restored a 2011 anti-union law that abolished collective bargaining rights, in a setback for unions and public workers. Unions are expected to appeal, sending the case to the Wisconsin Supreme Court, which is controlled by liberal justices.

The enactment of a 2011 anti-union state law, championed by Republicans, sparked weeks of protests and made Wisconsin the center of a national battle over union rights. The 2024 ruling striking down the law as unconstitutional had been on hold pending appeals.

That law, known as Act 10, effectively ended most public employees ability to bargain for wage increases and other issues, and forced them to pay more for health insurance and retirement benefits.

Supporters of the law say it gives local governments more control over workers and the powers needed to cut costs. They argue that repealing the law, which allowed schools and local governments to raise money through higher employee contributions for benefits, would bankrupt those entities.

Opponents argue the law has hurt schools and government agencies by stripping employees of the right to collectively bargain over pay and working conditions.

Christina Brey, a spokesperson for the unions that brought the lawsuit, said they remain confident on the merits of the case and that they are considering all available options.

"Wisconsin is better when all employees have a say in our workplaces, whether about class sizes in our schools, safety on the job, hours or any other number of areas," Brey said. "Public service workers across the state won't stop until we regain free, fair and full collective bargaining rights to negotiate with our employers."

Former Republican Gov. Scott Walker, who introduced and championed the law, praised the decision.

"This ruling is a major win for the hard-working taxpayers of Wisconsin and the people they elect to run our schools, state, and local governments," Walker said in a text message.

All five of the Democratic candidates for governor this year have vowed to repeal the law if elected. The primary is Aug. 11.

The law was Walker's signature legislative achievement, catapulting him onto the national political stage and spurring an unsuccessful attempt to recall him from office. Walker used the furor to mount a brief, ill-fated run for president that ended in 2015.

The Republican-controlled Legislature approved the law despite the massive protests that went on for weeks and drew as many as 100,000 people to the state Capitol.

The law effectively ended collective bargaining for most public unions by allowing them to bargain solely over base wage increases no greater than inflation. It also disallowed the automatic withdrawal of union dues, required annual recertification votes for unions, and forced public workers to pay more for health insurance and retirement benefits. It led to a dramatic decrease in union membership across Wisconsin.

The law has withstood numerous legal challenges over the years, but this is the first since the Wisconsin Supreme Court flipped to liberal control in 2023.

The lawsuit, filed by seven unions and three union leaders, argued Act 10 should be struck down because it creates unconstitutional exemptions for firefighters and other public safety workers. Attorneys for the Legislature and state agencies countered that the exemptions are legal, have already been upheld by other courts, and that the case should be dismissed.

The Legislature said in court filings that arguments made in the current case were rejected in 2014 by the state Supreme Court. The only change since that ruling is the makeup of the Wisconsin Supreme Court, attorneys for the Legislature said.

The three-judge appeals court panel ruled in a 2-1 decision to overturn a December 2024 ruling from Dane County Circuit Judge Jacob Frost, saying the challenged provisions of the law did not violate equal protection guarantees of the Wisconsin Constitution.

The lower court "had no legal basis" to declare the law unconstitutional, the appeals court said.

The Wisconsin Legislature had a "rational basis" for only placing certain public safety workers under the law, the appeals court said.

"Courts must respect both precedent and our role in deferring to the Legislature's fiscal policy decisions," the appeals court said.

Appeals Court Judge Shelley Grogan said in a concurring opinion that the timing of the lawsuit was "to say the least, suspect." The lawsuit was filed in November 2023, three months after the Wisconsin Supreme Court switched from majority conservative control to a majority of liberal justices.

"Renewed attempts to attack Act 10 on already-rejected bases simply because the composition of our supreme court has changed must be rejected," Grogan wrote. "A law's constitutionality does not ebb and flow with a court's composition, and the judicial branch must not be used to advance political agendas on either side of the political spectrum."

Appeals Court Judge Lisa Neubauer, the lone liberal on the three-judge panel, dissented, saying the lower court was correct. She said the Legislature made "arbitrary and irrational distinctions" by taking away collective bargaining rights from some public employees but not others.

Being Frank

By: Frank James
Special to the Milwaukee Times

Find it in you

Today's society is in a state of upheaval. Many people in the USA would say society is a mess. There are issues that have been ignored for too long that are coming to light that can easily lead to crisis. There are changes in morals, and culture, that many people feel are leading the US into purgatory. If someone is looking for a form of salvation in today's world, they may be in for a long search. There is a way to shorten the previous stated search. The searching person can go inside themselves and find salvation by finding inner peace, harmony and beauty.

There is little peace in the world today. There are wars, well conflicts, in several different countries. Some of the conflicts are not physical, but conflicting ideologies that lead to mental unrest in citizens. The more a person looks at television news, and social media, the more chaotic their mind becomes. The peace that many people seek is not going to be found in a political party, or mass rally. The peace a person needs to attain is inside oneself.

A person looking outside themselves for peace will tend to look to other people. The other people that the peace seeking person is looking at, nine out of ten, are in mental turmoil themselves. How can these chaotic minded people bestow peace when their minds are at war? To look to others, in any form or fashion, for peace is to throw your mind to a pack of rabid dogs. You have to find the peace you wish inside yourself. The only person who can truly calm you down is yourself. You are the only one who knows what is going on in your head. Another person may listen, and offer advice on how to gain peace. In the end the only person that can create, or find peace, for you is you.

Peace and harmony go hand in hand. Once you have attained inner peace and have stopped looking to outside forces, harmony comes over you. This harmony comes from your inner self, not alcohol, drugs, or voting. True harmony is a gift that can be gained only from oneself. The reason being is that what makes you feel harmony is unique to you. Others may share some similarities in what creates harmony. In the end you are unique, and what makes you harmonious is unique to you. If you want harmony, find it in yourself, and indulge to your hearts desire.

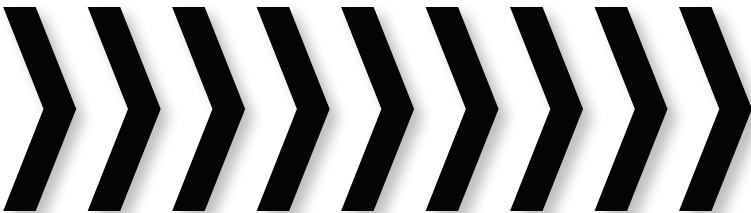

Beauty is something everyone craves and wants to have in their life. The eye of the beholder is supposed to be the measuring standard for beauty. The issue in the world today is, "What eye is the beholder?" Those who look to social media for beauty standards are like a person strapping into a rocket and blasting off to touch the sun. Beauty standards for both sexes have become a source of frustration for many. The reason is that many beauty standards are not tied to characteristics of the people who are pursuing the standard. This leads to women attempting to use beauty standards that do not align with their natural look. This chase leads many men to adopt clothing, hair styles, that feminize them. True beauty is something a person has to find inside themselves. No clothing brand, entertainer, model can give this to you. If you cannot find beauty inside yourself, no amount of outward changes will make you beautiful to the only person who matters, you.

Look inside yourself and find the peace, harmony and beauty to make your life a wonderful endeavor. Find the inner balance that enables you to maneuver through your day with a smile in your heart. Think how wonderful the USA, and the world, would be if two out of five people discovered inner peace, harmony and beauty. Can you say Utopia?

Johnson-Harris 68th annual family reunion

The Johnson Harris Annual Family Reunion tradition originated in Crossette, Arkansas in 1958, even during covid the family met over zoom. This year the 68th annual was held in Milwaukee, WI , hosted by Ben Johnson and his daughters, Jan Johnson Carlyle and Paula Johnson Stanford and his son, Jay Johnson. The reunion was held at the Holiday Inn and Suites 10831 W. Park Place, July 24 -26, 2026 and occurs on the 4th weekend in July every year. This year there were 125 family members present. The cousin from Long Beach, California won the prize for traveling the longest distance. Other places represented were Florence, Mississippi; Lorain, Ohio; Detroit, Michigan; Rockford, Illinois; Washington DC., Texas, Virginia, Alabama, and of course all parts of Arkansas. The oldest family member to attend is 93 years old, the youngest, one year old. Many family members from out of town were able to experience the attractions Milwaukee is known for, such as the Lake front, Brady Street Festival, Water St. District, The Harley Davidson Museum, and the Potawatomi Casino.

There was dancing and door prizes. The delicious food was catered by Terri Lynn's Soul Food Express, 10742 W. Hampton Ave. The program consisted of the family prayer, the family song, introduction of all family members and the annual family business meeting. Next year the 69th annual, will be held in Washington DC.

"A people without knowledge of their past, origin, history, and culture, is like a tree without roots," - Marcus Garvey. The 68th Annual Johnson Harris Family Reunion tradition puts that statement into action.

Community leaders support UNCF Annual Walk for Education

Milwaukee Brewers' racing sausages will kick off the walk

Some of Milwaukee's leading businesses are lending support to local college students by sponsoring the United Negro College Fund (UNCF) Milwaukee Walk for Education. The "42nd Annual Walk for Education," is Saturday, August 1, 2026, at Veteran's Park, on Milwaukee's Lakefront at 9 a.m. The famous Milwaukee Brewers' Racing Sausages will kick off the walk when it begins at 9:30 a.m. The event money raised directly empowers students and helps strengthen our nation's HBCUs (Historically Black Colleges and Universities). This annual event ensures that more students get to and through college.

"We appreciate the support of so many of Milwaukee's corporate leaders," said Tawanna Streater, Vice President of Development – Midwest Division for UNCF. "Their support of UNCF's mission of providing scholarships, internships, and other resources to help students graduate from college is impactful on multiple levels. Many of these sponsors are long-time supporters of UNCF and we appreciate their continuing partnership. It brings hope to our young people and our community."

Sponsors for the event include Northwestern Mutual, Rockwell Automation, Brewers Community Foundation, SC Johnson, We Energies, Versiti, and U.S. Bank.

Partner organizations have provided in-kind support. UNCF Milwaukee Walk for Education partners are The Truth radio station, WNOV radio, The Milwaukee Courier, The Milwaukee Times Weekly Newsppaer, Nouvelle Marketing, WISN-12, MY24/CW18, Thrive-On King, JobsWork MKE, and Milwaukee County Parks.

Community organizations volunteering to support the event include The Links, Inc. Cream City Chapter, Top Ladies of Distinction, Inc., PRC Jr. Hostesses, and Debs.

Milwaukee Mayor Cavalier Johnson is the UNCF Milwaukee Walk for Education Grand Champion. Joining the event as emcees are WISN-12 anchors Diana Gutierrez and Gerron Jordan. Jordan's support for UNCF is personal. He is a graduate of Howard University, one of the nation's Historically Black Colleges and Universities.

Individuals and teams can register now uncf.org/events. Scroll down to the Milwaukee event to register.

Individual runners may register at the event.

"Ours is not the struggle of one day, one week, or one year. Ours is not the struggle of one judicial appointment or presidential term. Ours is the struggle of a lifetime, or maybe even many lifetimes, and each one of us in every generation must do our part."
